

This would be the intersection of the physical casting registry DRF X0,Y0,Z0 as I detailed it.

The “axis” of the partial conic surface would lie some where above that casting DRF. If you chose to register as I showed you would have to offset surface [A]s from the casting DRF some nominal value accounting for casting variation to make the castings axis close to that of the machining.