

- The intent is to provide only one control joint since I need the other wall pier on the opposite side of the opening to support the out of plane loads.
- Does this adequately help isolate the lintel to prevent coupling beam rebar?
- From a crack control perspective, I should not need C/L's due to amount of horiz rebar provided.