Introduction

This document contains a table showing a list of GPS-relevant ISO-standards - status May 2013. The standards are mentioned in the order of increasing issue numbers. This Edition 25 of the list replace the May 2013, 24th edition. Changes in this list are marked with colour codes in the left column of the table (see the colours codes in the bottom of this page). 21 documents have had a new status from the 24th to the 25th edition.

The list contains all GPS relevant ISO standards in the following GPS-matrix system categories:

- Fundamental GPS standards
- Global GPS standards
- General GPS standards

But the list is not complete and exhaustive in the category:

- Complementary GPS standards

A few process specific complementary standards are in the list. The list also include standards concerning the drawing picture/views, not part of the GPS matrix system.

The list contains more than 250 standard documents. The documents can be split up into three types:

- ISO standards which are in force at the moment for the tolerancing of drawings and/or for the verification (measurement) of requirements given on drawings.
- ISO standards withdrawn. The list is far from complete for this type. The mentioned withdrawn standards are only given because they are the most important for the interpretation of older drawings, and standards where the rules of interpretation are changed in later editions.
- Working documents, not finalised, but expected to be stable in their content and is expected to be published with this content.

The table - its design and content

The columns contain the following information:

Column #1 - Type

The designation of type show the different type of ISO documents, e.g.:

ISO ISO - standard

Other types of ISO documents than ISO standards exist:

ISO/TR (Technical Report) with an informative and educational content,

ISO/TS (Technical Specification) with a content as a standard, but with a shorter development time and a shorter lifetime before reissue or reconfirmation is needed,

ISO/R (Recommendation) former designation for a standard. This designation is not used anymore for new standards.

New documents or documents with major change of are marked with colour in column #1

Type			New status
ISO			18				New or change of status in the 15 th version - November 2011
ISO			12				New or change of status in the 16 th version - January 2012
ISO			14				New or change of status in the 17 th version - March 2012
ISO			19				New or change of status in the 18 th version - April 2012
ISO			17				New or change of status in the 19 th version - May 2012
ISO			33				New or change of status in the 20 th version - August 2012
ISO			25				New or change of status in the 21 st version - October 2012
ISO			8				New or change of status in the 22 nd version - December 2012
ISO			25				New or change of status in the 23 rd version - February 2013
ISO			23				New or change of status in the 24 th version - May 2013
ISO			21				New or change of status in the 25 th version - August 2013

Column #2 - Issue number

ISO (and CEN) documents have a unique issue number for identification. A series of standards concerning the same issues can have the same issue number, but will then have different part numbers.

Column #3 - Status

In this column every document is designed to explain its present status:

P The document is in force at the moment.

T The document is withdrawn (The cell in the table is darkened to make it more visible)

WD, CD, DIS and FDIS is designations for ISO working documents in the different stages of development. Mentioned in the order they appear in the development process:

WD Working document in a working group under an ISO Technical Committee. The first sketch for the standard.

CD Official proposal for the content. Ballot take place in the ISO Technical Committee

DIS Draft International Standards. Ballot take place in ISO - with technical comments

FDIS Final Draft International Standard. Ballot take place in ISO - with editorial comments

UP Under Publication

Column #4 - Edition number

The issue number is not necessary unique. Examples exist, where two documents with the same issue number have the same edition number. The issue year is a more safe and unique identification. Working documents have no edition number in the table.

Column #5 - Issue year

Issue year of the document. Observe that CEN standards based on ISO standards may have a later issue date and issue year than the identical ISO standard.

Column #6 - Issue monthColumn #7 - GPS-matrix relation - G

The relation to the GPS-matrix system is identified by the following letters in the table (see figure 1):

F Fundamental GPS standard

B Global GPS standard

G General GPS standard

P Process specific complementary GPS standard - General tolerances

M Machine element specific complementary GPS standard - Tolerance systems for special geometries

T Not part of the GPS-matrix system - Drawing picture/views

U Not part of the GPS-matrix system - miscellaneous

Column #8 - Title

The full title is given. Observe that the designation “Geometrical Product Specifications (GPS)” in the title identifies the GPS standards updated and modernised by ISO/TC 213.
